

They're Reading It Everywhere...

It's time once again for The Observer's annual school subscription campaign. Janine Kock, Observer publisher, met with the middle school and high school band students last week to kick off the drive, for which the band members are the chief salespeople. For every subscription sold during the campaign, which runs through Friday, October 13, Kock Publishing will make a $5 donation to the purchaser's favorite school organization, and the band students will be contacting their friends, relatives, school employees and community members in order to boost the fundraising totals this year. Purchasers have an extra incentive this fall, since The Observer's subscription prices will be increasing for the first time in nine years at the conclusion of the campaign! Check out the subscription form in the August 24 edition of The Observer or contact a band student:
