Supervisors officially hire new full-time engineer

MICHAEL D. DAVIS
CORRESPONDENT

During Monday's Tama County Supervisors meeting, a new county engineer was hired. Benton Daleske, formerly the Fayette County assistant engineer, will start work on May 1.

The Assistant Engineer reported that contract rock should be finishing up this week. The X Avenue project in Dysart has been facing delays due to weather. Denco has finished work filling in cracks on various roads.

The utility that has previously delayed work on the Deer Creek bridge located on the west end of Toledo has been removed. It is currently unknown when PCI will start work on the bridge.

A fiscal year 2023 budget amendment hearing was set for May 15 at 9:45 a.m.

The resolution regarding maximum property tax dollars for General County Services and Rural County services was approved, stating that the General Services tax can't increase more than 4.29 percent and the Rural County tax can't increase more than 4.59 percent.

A resolution was approved transferring $492,083.36 from the Vienna TIF Fund to the Debt Service Fund. The Sheriff's quarterly report and Recorder's quarterly report were approved.

Claims totaling $387,017.03 were approved.

OFFICER

Howe repeated the command for Wolf to obey his orders, or he would tase her. Wolf yelled for her oldest child, still sitting in the car, to get out his phone and record the events. The children begin to scream and cry in the car as they watch the interaction unfold.

When the camera was picked up from the brush, Wolf was nowhere in sight. Howe bent down to pick up a few of her things that fell during the struggle, including the glasses she had been wearing. The children continued to scream for their mother as Howe paced about, waiting for other police officers to arrive.

The first to show up were two Meskwaki Tribal Police officers, who walked over to calm the still crying children, and Toledo Police Chief Dan Quigley was next to arrive.

The cruiser door was opened, and Wolf immediately made it known that she did not feel safe around Howe. Quigley attempted to speak to Wolf as Howe berated her, informing her she would be going to jail, talking over both Quigley and Wolf herself.

In all, five other police officers arrived on the scene in the aftermath: two officers from the Meskwaki Nation Tribal Police, one officer from the Tama Police Department, and two officers from the Toledo Police Department, including Quigley.

Wolf now faces a total of four charges including three counts of the Class C felony neglect or abandonment of a dependent and one count of driving while barred.

Wolf is considering filing a lawsuit, and Howe is currently on paid leave while an independent third party investigates the matter. Toledo City Attorney Michael Marquess said he expects a preliminary report to be completed by April 24, and it will be made public.

The Toledo City Council went into a closed session on Monday, April 10, to discuss possible litigation. In an email exchange, Quigley answered questions about body cameras and general procedure regarding these types of situations. He told the News-Chronicle he did advise Wolf of her Miranda rights once he arrived on the scene but could not directly comment further on the incident as the investigation is ongoing.

COUNCIL

Ambulance 241 switched out its anti-freeze leak for an oil leak, and the heater in the back went out, so it was approved to buy a new ambulance for $191,000. The ambulances will also be getting a new body wrap in June for around $7,000.

Automated external defibrillators will be purchased with a grant for both the library and the auditorium of the Tama Civic Center. The auditorium will also be remodeled with shades, paint, and a new projector.

Brian Price was hired for summer help. The discussion of removing dead and diseased trees on berms was pushed to a later date.

The catch basin at Fourth and Park Street will be redone, and the water line at the Tama Park will be repaired. The council designated $800 toward the acquisition of plants for downtown Tama.

The Snyder contract was approved for the Highway 63 culvert. Changes were made to the mowing contract, and Potter's mowing bid was approved.

The Fire Department is patching up one of their trucks, and Public Works has patched holes in the road.

Tama City Clerk is working on the next budget and is having everyone do harassment training.

The Water Department has been flushing hydrants.

The Nuisance Officer has cleaned up 909 Harding Street and is working on others. The Tama Police Department received 324 calls between March 17 and April 17.

Thanks to all who came to my party, sent cards, flowers, gifts or stopped by to visit. I was ecstatic to hear from you all.

Thank you to my daughters and their husbands who planned a great party and my nieces and granddaughters for making it happen.

God Bless, Martha Dolezal
